

What Is Xero and How Can a Xero Accountant Benefit Me?

Xero accounting utilises modern technologies in order to benefit both the accountant and the client. It streamlines many of the day-to-day parts of running a business which facilitates the entire accounting process. It automatically receives information about your bank accounts so that you can see what has and has not been paid, send invoices instantly and it allows you, as boss, to see what your staff have been paid or have earned.

If you are heading to a supplier's, you can log the receipt there and then without having to think about it. It is immediately ready for your Xero accountant to work with all of your details without you having to contact them. This is because everything is done in the cloud, meaning that all of the data and the computations are done seamlessly online through one or a series of services. Your accountant can log into your account, look at the details and give you advice without you having to send details through to them and wait for a reply. The information is easy to use and it avoids any confusion over different computer file types or keeping all of your files up to date. It is even possible to talk to your accountant through Xero which can save a lot of time.

The program works through an app or their website. If you use a smartphone or you use the Internet, Xero is tailored for you. You do not need a particular computer system to work with it because it is all done while logged onto the Internet. All you need is your preferred operating system and a web browser. It is always important, however, to ensure that your accountant is Xero Certified. This will give you piece of mind as you can trust that they fully understand the system and its more powerful features.

Unlike many other software-based accounting services, such as QuickBooks, there is no up-front cost. Xero offers a monthly payment plan and there is no need to install any software to your PC. There is even a free trial period so that you can test whether using Xero and a Xero Accountant is right for you.
